All Gold Key, Silver Key, and Honorable Mention award-winning works will be on display at the Plains Art Museum's Starion Gallery from February 2-March 9th.

The state ceremony will take place on Saturday, March 9th from 5:30-8pm at Plains Art Museum in Fargo. All students, educators, judges, families, and friends are invited to attend. The winners of North Dakota State University's new scholarships in art and writing will also be announced at the ceremony.

All Gold Key winners are forwarded to New York City for national adjudication. The national winners will be announced on March 12, 2019.

Since the program's founding in 1923, the Awards have fostered the creativity and talent of millions of students, including renowned alumni who have gone on to become leaders in their fields, including Andy Warhol, Truman Capote, Richard Avedon, Philip Pearlstein, and Sylvia Plath. More recently, Stephen King, Richard Linklater, Zac Posen, and Lena Dunham received Scholastic Art & Writing Awards when they were teens. Locally, Laura Youngbird, Director of Native American Art at Plains Art Museum, was a Scholastic teen award winner.

For Gold Key works of art and writing in the Awards' 29 categories, including architecture, painting, flash fiction, poetry, printmaking, video game design, and more, the opportunities for recognition will continue when the works are adjudicated again on a national level by a panel of leading creative professionals. National Gold Medalists will be announced March 12, 2019 and will be honored during a special awards ceremony at the world-famous Carnegie Hall in New York City in June 2019. All National Medalists are eligible for a wealth of additional opportunities such as inclusion in the Art.Write.Now.Tour traveling exhibition and The Best Teen Writing anthology. National Medalist poets are considered for the National Student Poets Program, the nation's highest honor for young poets presenting original work.

Quotes

As NDSU Associate Professor Kelly Sassi explains, "When we stepped up to serve as state affiliate for the awards in 2014, there were only 20 entries from the state of North Dakota. By publicizing the awards to every school in the state, participation increased exponentially to 120, then 200, then 300, and this year to 417 total submissions. The number of national awards has also increased from zero to one to three to six." For Sassi, as Director of the Red River Valley Writing Project, accessibility is a driving concern. "Every teen in North Dakota, from Belcourt to Beulah, from Williston to Wahpeton," she says, "deserves a chance to be recognized for creative talent in writing and art. Our summer workshops support both teachers and students in honing their skills."

"We have an amazing network of Affiliate Partners who bring the program to life by recognizing and encouraging creative teens across America," said Virginia McEnerney, Executive Director of the Alliance for Young Artists & Writers. "Over the course of the program's nearly century-long history, we've learned that this recognition can be life changing. For many creative teens, their regional Scholastic Award leads to recognition at the national level, where opportunities for exhibition, publication, and millions of dollars in scholarships await those who receive top honors."
